2. Voting Name: GOTION VOTE.
3. Fill out the number of votes for the election

For proposal subject to non-cumulative voting, please indicate your voting decision as: Approve, Object, or Abstain.

For proposal subject to cumulative voting, please indicate the number of votes you wish to allocate to a particular candidate. Shareholders should only vote up to the number of votes they hold for each proposal group. If a shareholder casts more votes in an election than the number of votes they are entitled to, or if they cast more votes than the number of candidates to be elected in a differential election, all votes cast by such shareholder on the proposal group shall be deemed invalid. The number of election votes owned by a shareholder = the total number of voting shares owned by the shareholder \times the number of candidates to be elected.

Shareholders may allocate their election votes among candidates as they wish, but the total number of votes casted must not exceed the number of election votes owned by the shareholder.

4. If a shareholder votes on the general proposal, it is considered to express the same opinion on all proposals except for the cumulative voting proposal. When shareholders vote repeatedly on both the general proposal and specific proposals, the first valid vote is counted. If the shareholder votes on a specific proposal first, and then on the general proposal, the vote on the specific proposal is counted for the specific proposal, and the vote on the general proposal is counted for the other proposals not yet voted on.
